

Hallmarks of the ACDP

- Evidence of Providence spirituality in one's life
- Fidelity to personal prayer
- Participation periodically in Congregational liturgies, prayer, designated gatherings, discussions, meals, faith sharing, and on-going formation in CDP spirituality and mission
- Public witness to the Gospel by one's life and work

The bond between Sisters and Associates consists of living the Congregation's charism of trust in a loving God and expressing that charism in service to others. CDP Associates benefit from sharing in the daily prayer of the Sisters and other Associates. They have access to CDP publications and the community website. They also receive the spiritual and emotional support from the Sisters and other Associates in both difficult and joyful times, while benefitting from their experience of community with the CDPs, other Associates and the worldwide Congregations of the Sisters of Divine Providence founded by Blesses John Martin Moye.
